Go Global or Local with Executive Telephone Coaching!

Here's the breaking news - no longer is telephone coaching the domain of the "working-from-home-life-coach"! As companies go global there is a need to deliver tailored development interventions in countries where there is a lack of coaching expertise. As organisations begin to use phone coaching as a means of ensuring their managers in far flung places are not left behind, they also begin to appreciate that it's a really effective use of time even when the client and coach are in the same country! And all at a competitive price compared to face to face coaching!

In the last year greenfields delivered a programme of phone coaching for a whole layer of management in a retail organisation. This quickly dispelled the myth that you can only be truly effective when working face to face. In the absence of body language there is even more attention to the dialogue, more questions are required and clients tend to feel safer and are therefore more open.
